

PICTURE: Documentary crew films Albatross stunt over Manhattan

7 November 2016

It's not a common sight, but it happened on 4 November: A rare Grumman Albatross flying up the Hudson River somewhere between the Statue of Liberty and Battery Park, with a man standing up in the bow hatch, arms outstretched against a 150kt headwind.

Keep reading this article by becoming a FlightGlobal member now

Enjoy unrestricted access to FlightGlobal

To continue reading this article you need to subscribe now. Become a FlightGlobal subscriber and unlock breaking news, independent views and expert analysis covering aerospace, air transport and defence developments. Membership includes:

Unlimited access to all digital content giving the confidence

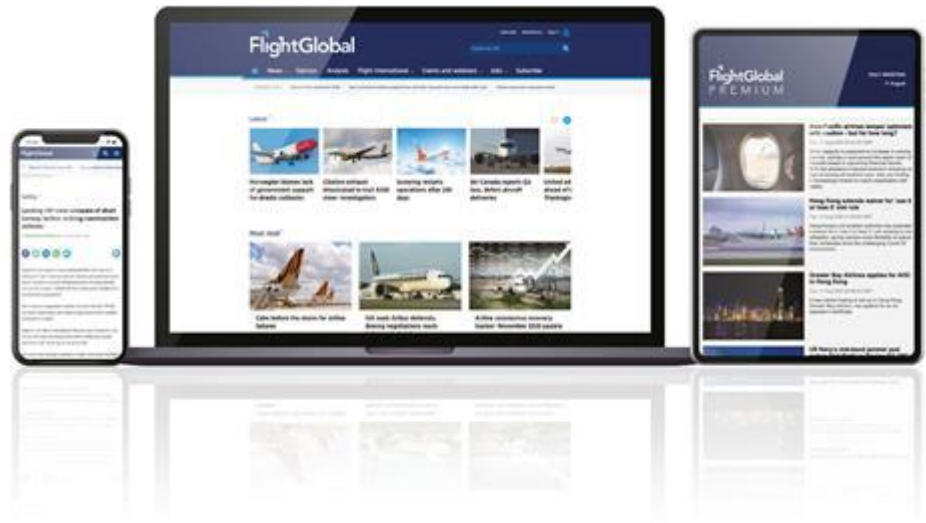

Welcome to flightglobal.com. This site uses cookies.

Read our policy.

make informed decisions

Never miss out any breaking news
with the Premium
Daily News Alert
direct to your inbox

Monthly comprehensive round-up of the latest aviation developments in Flight International
magazine in print
or digital format

JOIN NOW

If you aren't ready to subscribe, you can SIGN UP FOR A FREE NEWSLETTER delivered direct to your inbox. If you have already subscribed please SIGN IN now

Welcome to flightglobal.com. This site uses cookies.

Read our policy.